

Tears on Edge

Through the opposite times of love and joy come the emotions that reside on the razors edge of the heart. That thin line that triggers the tears of joy, come from the same warm waters of the soul that feed the tears of sorrow. We all have so little time with the ones we love no matter what that time may be, it is always to short. Rejoice in the gift we are given in love and remind one another how lucky we have been just to have loved for one day. Let your tears of joy and sorrow wash over the pain from your loss, and be cognoscente that life will always be a mystery full of change. Know that that someone was blessed to have been loved by you.

Robert Rogers